A market gardener/farmer At Narara Ecovillage

Grow your own business in a supportive community

Are you passionate about local food and growing regeneratively? A new opportunity exists for a capable person to build a business selling organic produce.

Do you:

- Have a keen interest in gardening, and organic/biodynamic farming
- Have a strong work ethic, with good manual skills and strive for excellence and productivity
- Have good physical fitness/endurance and are happy working outdoors in a variety of weather conditions
- Are able to integrate and work in a collaborative culture
- Dream of creating your own business and making a difference in the local food supply?

We are looking for someone to run a farm business on part of this land, providing diversified vegetable boxes, eggs and potential for additional food production down the track.

Narara Ecovillage is on the Central Coast of NSW, just north of Sydney on the major north-south railway line. This established community of 200 people (60 children), has 120 people already living on site, with the remainder at various stages of building homes. A good number of these people will make up part of the market base.

What we have to offer:

- a great climate & productive land, and plenty of water with a 45ML dam
- an excess of day time solar power with battery storage
- sheds, hothouses and a nursery with good access (bitumen/earth-based roads)
- some farm machinery and tools and - including a farm bot!
- a growing market both inside and outside the gate
- some voluntary and emergency labour when required
- support from passionate members who are soil scientists, horticulturalists and permies
- possible housing / onsite living opportunities
- near to transport and Sydney
